Carnarvon Castle is one of the finest castles in Great Britain, covering between two and three acres of ground. It was commenced by Edward I in 1283, and completed by his successor, Edward II, who was born in it. The walls enclose an area of about three acres, and are from seven to nine feet thick. During the Civil War it was garrisoned for the King, and after changing hands frequently was finally captured by the forces of the Parliament in 1646. A special interest is attached to the Castle this year (1911) in the investiture of the Prince of Wales in the ancient edifice.
